

Haiti Relief Update - Harvest's Luke 10 Ministry

Dateline: February 11, 2010 by John Wood

Guerino and his son Guersley are just arriving in Port-au-Prince to bring relief - physical, emotional, spiritual - to people of the city. They will stay there over the weekend then return to their temporary home and base of operations in Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic.

The next phase of Harvest's relief effort is now in place. Following is a summary of the plan:

"The distribution of aid will be carried out by Harvest-Haiti, under the coordination of Pastor Guerino and his team. All distribution work will be done with great care and prudence in order to help the recipients meet their particular needs.

We propose two ways of distributing this aid:

- 1- Putting together and distributing tents to those in need, if possible.
- 2- Giving very small grants to people which will enable them to meet their particular urgent needs.

This activity will be put into motion immediately ... The Harvest-Haiti team will take all precautions possible in order to assure the effective and correct distribution of this fund.

A report will be sent to Harvest after each step of this distribution."

The plan contains other details touching on accountability and reporting. We will pass along reports from Guerino as soon as we have any more information. We envision at least two more relief trips to Haiti after this current one.
